Collected Poems/Autumn 2006-2012 Lucien Quincy Senna

Lucien Quincy Senna conjures the emotional life of an expatriate American mother living in Oxford, England, torn between her duty to her children and her lover's quarrel with American politics, while coming to terms with cultural heritages that often clash, yet sustain her imagination. Her verse has been greatly influenced by both British writers such as Oscar Wilde and Dr. Samuel Johnson, as well as African American essayist James Baldwin and singer Billie Holiday. And her language in this collection of verse written over several years reverberates with the unique images and intonations of her native Boston's diverse neighborhoods.
