They said that the heart wants what the heart wants but if one has never known love how could one confess such a thing? When love is as unfamiliar as the moon without the sky, April a sheltered young woman in the midst of forgotten secrets that are whispered amongst talking walls she is left vulnerable in a world where money talks and priceless things are forfeited and negotiated. Clichés confuses her heart and black eyes and bruised ribs sustained prove b.s. that pain is love. And her love is seen as a revolving door of hope only to be ridiculed by the truths of his indiscretions which have involuntarily tainted her existence. No one knows how hard it is when a heart wants to prove its love to an unworthy heart yet the past reminds her heart of what could be. She struggles with her vows to a grown aged boy and the promised true love of a grown man but will it be too late for April to discover what true love is and will her future have its chance at forever' fairy tale?
