The scope and nature of humanitarian emergencies generated by civil conflicts and wars in Africa exceed the continental capacity to adequately and effectively respond to them. With the founding of the African Union and the drafting of the Responsibility to Protect doctrine, the basis for collective action against genocide, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity, it is a critical time to reflect how best to address issues of regional peace and conflict. New regional conflicts around health, water, land and food security in the world's poorest most socially fragmented continent strengthen the need for this volume to assess African regional arrangements and provide new policy recommendations.
